

Every parcel of land functions as home to the wildlife that live off the land. Plants convert solar energy

{loadposition content_right}

In the Seattle area, where I live, the land habitats range from alpine forests in the Cascade Mountains

We celebrate the animals as well as the people. We recognize that each species of wildlife uses the land

- (1) Ants collect seeds and nesting materials from the tree debris that litters the ground.
- (2) Squirrels collect nuts for food and sticks to build their nests.
- (3) Birds nest in trees and feast on the tree fruits and fallen seeds.
- (4) Deer snack on grasses as well as the fallen apples from my orchard.

This website contains many ideas to help land owners make good decisions to use their land to help themselves and other people. We hope that land owners will appreciate the animals that seek to live alongside them on their land and avoid using toxic weapons that eliminate wildlife that are important to other creatures for food or protection.

{loadposition content_footer}